

Gold was amongst the first metals used by Iranians and its history goes back to many millennia before Christ. Decorative pieces made up of gold have been recovered from archeological excavation sites in different parts of the country.

The history of gem production in Iran traces back to periods before the introduction of western machinery and techniques, when local miners discovered turquoise, quartz, amethyst, emerald, ruby and silver deposits. Currently, these precious minerals and stones are found in approximately 200 regions of Iran, with other important mines located in Isfahan, Khorasan, and Zanjan. According to a survey, Iran ranks world's 6th largest gold jewelry consuming country after India, USA, China, Turkey and Saudi Arabia.

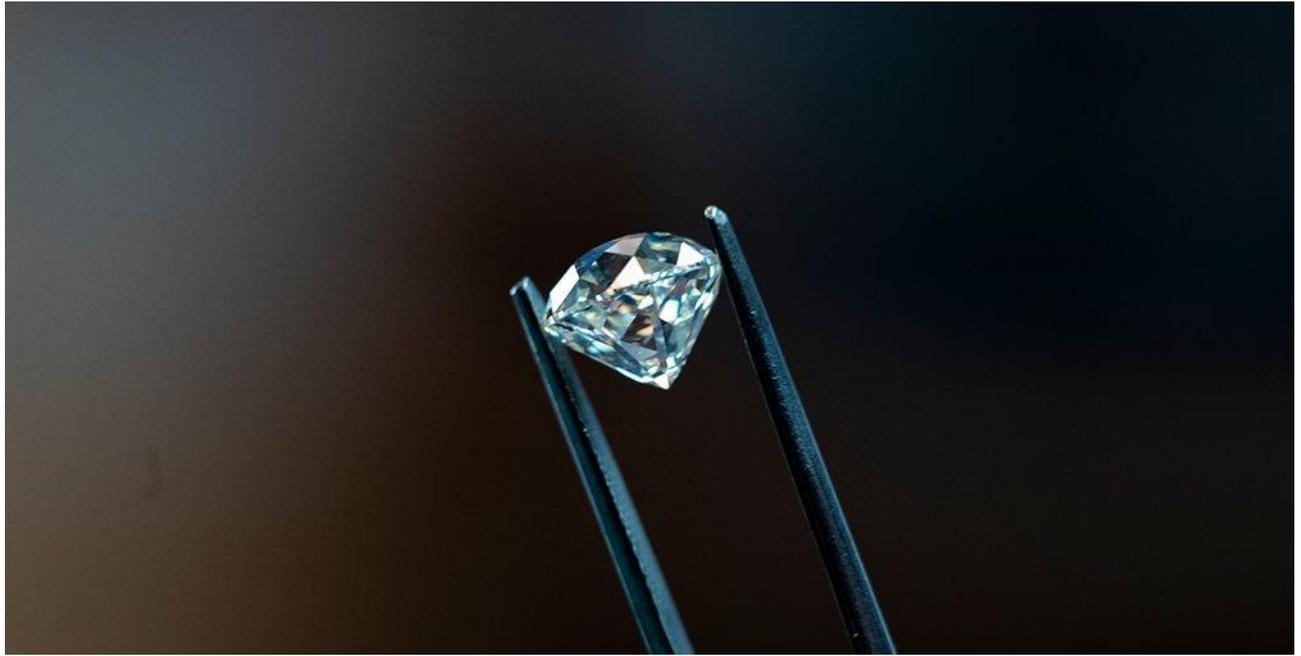

Today, Iran enjoys 320 tons of gold deposits and contributes 3% to the world's total production rate.
